The attorneys at Bernabei & Wachtel are known for fighting—and winning—on behalf of individual clients with serious employment issues. Through their efforts, they have challenged large corporate and government entities to operate fairly and without discrimination.

“A number of our cases have a significant public interest or are part of a broader political struggle,” notes partner Lynne Bernabei. Partner David Wachtel adds, “We provide clients with responsive, individualized service, and also handle large litigation.”

Bernabei & Wachtel is nationally recognized for its work in employment, sexual harassment, whistleblower, and civil rights law. The firm’s lawyers regularly handle severance negotiations for executives and professionals in law and medicine, as well as cases against universities, medical schools, law firms, and Fortune 500 companies.

The firm is ranked Tier 1 in Washington, D.C. for individuals’ employment law by U.S. News – Best Lawyers® “Best Law Firms,” and its three partners—Wachtel, Bernabei, and Alan Kabat—have all been selected for inclusion in The Best Lawyers in America®. They have also been named in Super Lawyers and listed among The National Law Journal/Legal Times’ Leading Lawyers. The partners speak and publish regularly on important employment issues and are frequently quoted in the national press.

Recently, Bernabei & Wachtel garnered national attention for an important whistleblower case against Fannie Mae, as well as for litigation challenging law school faculty hiring and tenure practices at Georgetown Law School and DePaul University. The firm is also known for its deep commitment to social justice, and continues to work with the American Civil Liberties Union and other public interest groups to curb the excesses of executive authority.
